Are you ready for an ERP?

Nobody buys an enterprise resource planning (ERP) system because they want to. They buy it because they have to, or because they understand the value of an ERP system. The trick in both cases is to get the timing right. If you buy because you have to, chances are your business is not performing as well as it should.

This could be because your business process becomes too complex for a manual or outdated system. It could also be attributed to the fact that your manual or outdated system requires that your business uses more resources than it needs to produce saleable goods.

Either way, by the time you realise this you have lost money. Timing the purchase of your system when you do understand the value of an ERP is just as difficult. You need to balance affordability with future capacity. Read more...

QBScan Gives Vericon Access to Information

With QBScan, Vericon Outsourcing has access to the information they need to deliver superior customer service to all their clients. QBScan offers Vericon full real-time visibility on their clients' orders. Knowing what was shipped and in which container will allow Vericon to answer customer queries immediately. Read more...

News

CAL: Central Analytical Laboratories (CAL) became the first QBCon client to invest in a Lab-i system integrated with the Business Intelligence (BI) tool, EasyAsk. QBCon's innovation did not stop there. The business solution provider is in the process of integrating Lab-i to Pastel. When a test is processed and finalised, users will be able to generate an invoice for the client in Pastel.

Making BI as Easy as Web Search

CEO Club Breakfast

In 2008 QBCon created the QBCon CEO Club as a forum to give companies access to information and interpretation from some of the most noted economists, political analysts, commentators and futurists. The purpose is to have an intimate session where an exclusive audience from the same pool is invited to can gain global and local insight that will guide them in strategic management.

The speaker is Donald Dinnie from Denez Reitz. Donald's topic will be on the Consumer Protection Bill and how it can influence companies.

If you wish to attend this session please contact Derik van Wyk at derik@medios.co.za.
